FOREWORD

Martin Smedley

Looking back over the years since we first launched the charity in 2001 it is a joy to see how much we have managed to achieve with very limited resources. I am also very proud that gender equality, empowerment of girls and women and poverty reduction through micro-savings and loans are now fully integrated and central to all our project delivery.

Recent years have seen the successful completion of two major projects: HEAL, our UKAid funded programme, developing Health, Empowerment And Livelihoods amongst young women and girls in the Mayuge district of South East Uganda. The programme was highlighted by STOPAIDS and Oxfam Policy and Practice for its success in tackling the spread of HIV through the economic empowerment of women, and GEHKU our 4-year, Big Lottery funded, project delivering Gender Equality and Health in Kasese, Western Uganda (GEHKU), which saw us exceed all our targets, reach nearly 300k beneficiaries and receive very positive affirmation from our funders' project manager.

In 2017 we reached a milestone in the history of Act4Africa with the opening of Kathy's Centre, Act4Africa's first community health and education centre. It was the dream of my late wife Kathy to provide a centre for women together with high quality early years' education for their children.

Once again, all this has been made possible thanks to the efforts of our dedicated supporters, volunteers, staff and trustees. We could not do any of this without their amazing support.

Martin Smedley, Chief Executive

WHAT

OVERCOME POVERTY

- GENDER EQUALITY
- WOMEN'S ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE
- WOMEN'S EMPOWERMENT
- EDUCATION
- HEALTH

GENDER EQUALITY

Gender inequality is the most fundamental obstacle to eradicating poverty and achieving economic and social development.

In rural Africa gender inequality is generally entrenched, rooted in cultural beliefs and traditions. As a result, many women and girls live in a degenerative cycle of ill health, poor education and poverty. Culturally, women are expected to be submissive and not to offer their opinion. They are not expected to refuse sex or insist on protection, either within or outside of marriage. Household decisions and income are usually controlled by men.

Tackling gender inequality is central to our work, and our Theatre for Development workshops have proven to be particularly effective in challenging views that uphold these inequalities and misconceptions. We tackle the issue head on by actively engaging local communities to promote the rights of women. This awareness supports the work we do to empower women through economic independence, education and sexual and reproductive health.

OUR IMPACT

Our Big Lottery Funded project, Gender Equality and Health in Kasese, Uganda (GEHKU), has raised awareness of the rights of women and challenged gender inequality by targeting vulnerable groups. Over 279k beneficiaries were reached with this project.

- Over 300 teachers, health workers and traditional herbalists have been equipped with the knowledge and skills necessary to promote the sexual and human rights of women and challenge gender inequality with all members of their communities.
- 300 school-based peer educators have been trained to deliver age-appropriate gender equality workshops through after-school clubs.

- There has been a 32% increase in the number of women and girls who freely express confidence to refuse sexual advances.
- 59% more women and girls now show an ability to negotiate safe sex.
- 37% more boys and men now show an increased respect for girls' and women's sexual rights.
- 88% of the project's beneficiaries now freely discuss HIV/AIDS prevention with their spouses.

Men have also been actively involved in bringing about change for women through our Health, Empowerment and Livelihoods (HEAL) project. 'Pro-husbandry' work encourages family members to recognise women's abilities and support their involvement in savings groups.

MEET PAUL

Paul took part in community sessions on gender equality, stigma and domestic violence as part of the GEHKU project. He was immensely touched by the content expressed by the team through role play and story-telling.

"I realise now the mistake that I commit as a male in my home."

Polygamy is commonplace in Uganda and Paul had come close to selling the land that he owned with his wife, in order to pay the dowry on a second wife. As is the norm, Paul's wife was unemployed and responsible for all food production. She looked after the land, home and children, yet he considered her "useless and a beggar".

"I had forgotten that the work she does in the home and garden is a big contribution and support to the family."

"From the sessions with Act4Africa I have learnt that all people are equal and play distinct roles in family life. I will openly tell my wife about this and also apologise for treating her badly. I now understand her situation and can negotiate our love freshly."

We train female community trainers in gender equality.

They teach thousands more about the rights of women and girls.

Awareness spreads and women and girls claim their place in society.

WOMEN'S ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE

One of the key factors affecting gender equality is women's economic independence.

Women's economic participation speeds up development, helps overcome poverty, reduces inequalities and improves children's nutrition, health, and school attendance. Women typically invest a higher proportion of their earnings in their families and communities than men.*

In rural Uganda, the overriding issues affecting women's economic independence are gender relations within the home and lack of capital to expand production beyond subsistence.

Funded by UKaid, our Health, Empowerment and Livelihoods (HEAL) programme in Mayuge District, Uganda, equips young women (aged 15-30) with the skills and training they need to become financially independent. Through business training and the establishment of women's savings groups with access to loans, they develop their own enterprise and livelihood opportunities.

*Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development

- Training sessions in business, basic finance and book-keeping skills have been delivered to 1,632 young women.
- Women's access to savings and loans has increased through the 90 savings groups established. A total of £30,465 has been saved, 320 loans have been taken and 285 repaid to date.
- Economic participation by young women has increased and 1,203 business enterprises have been set up, including food production/trading, retail, catering and hairdressing.
- Some initial resistance was encountered towards the women's groups by men in the community. To counter this, we have involved the men in agri-husbandry groups. The purpose and benefits of the women's groups are shared with them, addressing issues of accountability, equality, empowerment, sustainable jobs and livelihoods, income generation and micro-enterprise. Most men now endorse the groups and support the women, often saving with them.
- Based on the HEAL project in Uganda, we have established a small-scale replica project in Malawi, supported by Soroptimist International, Manchester. 78 enterprises have been set up by young women.

MEET IRENE

Irene (24) is married with 2 children. She is secretary of the Tukolele Walala HEAL group in Uganda. Through her training she has developed a business selling second hand clothes and now she saves regularly from the income.

"I started with an objective and, with the help of Act4Africa, I developed a business plan. My whole family has learnt the importance of saving. Thanks to Act4Africa, my siblings and children have a better and brighter future."

A positive role model, Irene encourages other women to save and educate their children. As group secretary, she also enjoys encouraging others to develop good business ideas that will help them get out of poverty.

"Being part of a HEAL group has given me confidence and hope. Now I am empowered to set my own priorities and values as a woman."

WOMEN'S EMPOWERMENT

Women are agents of change in their families, communities and countries. Increasing their voice and their socioeconomic and political participation is essential for sustainable development.

It is widely acknowledged that providing women with the confidence to make informed decisions about their lives leads to empowerment in other areas, including household decisions and community activities. Enabling women to take control of their sexual and reproductive health, and equipping them with vital life-skills and self-esteem, are crucial components of their empowerment delivered through our programmes.

Act4Africa provides empowerment to women and girls through education and economic independence, but the success of this is based on the social and psychological empowerment they also gain. Our programmes have a positive impact on participants' confidence and self-esteem as they feel empowered not only through training and knowledge, but also through social support and encouragement from working together.

OUR IMPACT

As part of our HEAL programme in South Eastern Uganda, 90 Female Community Mentors have so far been recruited and trained. They lead regular group meetings to build self-confidence and entrepreneurship amongst members.

- We have delivered sessions to more than 1000 young women and girls (aged 15-30) about life skills, empowerment, household management and community involvement.
- All-female training, meetings and feedback sessions have enabled uninhibited freedom of expression and encouraged mutual support between beneficiaries.
- Young women and girls have been supported to overcome self-stigma and other negative attitudes that would otherwise hinder demonstration of their full potential and productivity.

- 77% of beneficiaries have gained new skills needed to contribute to community decisions. These may include, for example, holding the position of chair, secretary or treasurer in a HEAL group or simply feeling confident to approach local chiefs about community matters.
- 84% of beneficiaries now manage household resources and/or are involved in household decision making.

Through our GEHKU project in Western Uganda, over 600 school girls, teachers, health workers and traditional herbalists have been trained as trainers to deliver key health and gender equality messages. With consequent motivation and confidence, they have all gone on to provide effective leadership roles within their communities.

- The GEHKU project delivered a 49% increase in the overall number of women and girls holding a community leadership position, which was well above target.

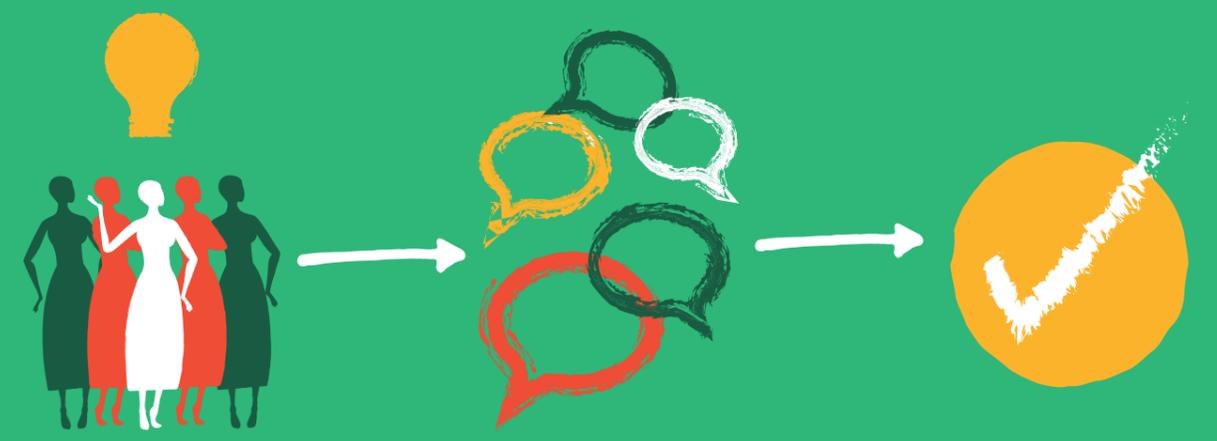

MEET REBECCA

Rebecca is 21 years old and does not remember a single time when her parents consulted her about any decisions related to either herself or her family. She has grown up used to the notion that others make decisions for her. Consequently, she had no confidence to make decisions for herself prior to participation in an Act4Africa training session.

"Act4Africa have empowered me to make informed and independent decisions and helped me develop personal goals which I aim to achieve."

"I have now started to value myself and I am going to reach out to my fellow girls to encourage them. It is high time we took full control of our lives and proved to the world that we have what it takes to participate in all decisions and activities."

We give women self-esteem and confidence to make informed decisions.

Their voice grows in the home, the community and the country.

Women become empowered to affect positive socio-economic and political change.

EDUCATION

With even a few years of education, women have better economic prospects; fewer, healthier and longer-living children; and better chances of sending their own children to school.

Our programmes are delivered in communities where 60% of girls never attend primary school, and 85% of those attending secondary school leave before the age of 18.*

Encouraging and enabling girls to stay in school is a vital step in our process of empowering women, but is not always easy in the deprived, rural areas in which we operate. The prevalence of HIV/AIDS, gender inequality and poverty all impact on the education of girls.

It is not only encouraging girls to remain in education that constitutes a vital part of Act4Africa's work, but also enabling them to do so through essential support and financial assistance.

Education is a process, not an outcome, and the ongoing support and training of girls and women enables real progress to be made.

* Uganda Bureau of Statistics

OUR IMPACT

To date we have trained 300 female teenage peer educators, in Ugandan schools, to circulate vital gender equality and sexual and reproductive health information amongst their communities.

Peer educators are a core part of our Grow A Girl programme. 10 of them are now sponsored by individual supporters who donate monthly to help the girls complete their secondary education. These are a few of the girls' achievements this year:

- Daphine (14) and Roseline (13) both progressed to secondary school.
- Sharon (19) counsels young HIV+ mothers at a local ante-natal clinic. She passed her secondary exams well and is studying to be a medical records clerk.
- Talent (15) set up a club at her school to teach her peers about the problems of early pregnancy and the dangers of HIV. She is now head prefect.

Educating out-of-school adolescents and young women is equally important to us. As part of the HEAL project, over 1000 have been engaged in our community education and group sessions to access business and financial literacy training.

- Over 76% of these are now able to undertake basic record-keeping and develop simple business plans.

Health education has, of course, been at the heart of our programmes in Africa for 15 years during which time we have used our innovative Theatre for Development techniques to train over 1.4m people in HIV prevention.

MEET BRIDGET

Bridget joined our Grow A Girl programme towards the end of her schooling when she showed great potential in her chosen career as a nurse. However, as one of 7 children, her family could not afford to continue her education. Thanks to sponsorship from a small but growing number of supporters, Bridget has recently graduated as a comprehensive nurse.

As a peer educator, she has achieved so much for her community. She advises her elders against gender inequality and domestic violence and models respect of others.

"In my community, I have set up groups of children who teach each other to become role models. They grow vegetables and sell them in the market to save money for books and pens.

"At school I teach my peers not to stigmatise those living with HIV/AIDS, but to befriend and counsel them to appreciate their role as valuable community members."

Where we operate, 60% of girls never attend school. They are susceptible to early pregnancy, ill health and poverty.

You can sponsor a girl to stay in school for just £15 a month.

She will use her education to earn a living, avoid HIV, have healthier children and send them to school.

HEALTH

Health education and provision of services have been the cornerstone of Act4Africa's work for over 15 years. They underpin all our programmes.

East and Southern Africa have the highest number of people living with HIV (over 19 million*) and the region accounts for 43% of the global total of new HIV infections. Gender inequality results in most of those living with HIV being women and girls. They lack the knowledge and ability to control their own sexual and reproductive health and often suffer from gender-based violence. Poverty and lack of opportunity often lead to high risk sexual behaviour. Access to prevention information and health services are biased towards men.

Encouraging and providing testing for the whole community, and educating them about sexual and reproductive health rights, is imperative to reducing the spread of HIV. Knowledge and understanding of sexually transmitted infections and HIV prevention, risks, transmission and treatment is vital to this process.

As well as delivering health services and counselling we also deliver large scale community events. These involve interactive theatre, dance, group exercises, workshops and Q&A sessions, all designed to impart and test understanding of key messages about HIV/AIDS and dispel myths and stigma.

* UNAIDS 2016 data

OUR IMPACT

Act4Africa has so far provided over 1.4 million people with HIV/AIDS and sexual health awareness training and tested 73,126 for HIV and other STIs.

To date we have distributed 295k condoms to communities in Uganda.

- Our GEHCU project in Western Uganda has delivered a 20% increase in awareness and knowledge of condom use and a 20% increase in men and women (aged 15-54) reporting condom use during their last sexual intercourse with a casual partner.
- The number of girls (aged 10-14) and women (aged 15-54) who feel able to negotiate safe sex has increased by 59%, well above target.

- GEHCU has delivered a 41% increase in people showing care, acceptance and positive attitudes towards people living with HIV/AIDS and disabilities. However, many of those living with HIV/AIDS still show a reluctance to disclose their status, demonstrating the strength of stigma still attached to the virus.
- The number of people living with HIV/AIDS now receiving access to antiretroviral treatment has increased by 44%.
- We also deliver HIV awareness training, testing and counselling as part of our HEAL programme in South East Uganda. We are delighted that 80% of both male and female beneficiaries now demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of HIV/AIDS and 82% of those testing positive are taking up referrals for treatment.

MEET BRENDA

Meet Brenda (18 years). She is one of just 15% of girls who remain in school at this age in Uganda. During the week she stays away from home with relatives and walks long distances to school each day. Her parents are poor subsistence farmers; they struggle to pay her school fees and provide her with no additional money. At times, she has been forced to sell her body "to afford nice things". She had never thought of HIV/AIDS as one of the risks of having sex.

Brenda attended an Act4Africa HIV awareness raising event in her village. She met with Act4Africa Field Officer, Daisy Nankumbi, who spoke to her about HIV/AIDS and highlighted the many risks involved in engaging in early sex.

"I now want to start up a new chapter in my life. I will be tested for HIV and take full control of my sexual life by making informed decisions. My message to all young girls is that engagement in early sex stands to make girls more vulnerable through HIV/AIDS or early pregnancy. They should abstain and prioritise their education. There are good things in the future and a time for everything."

Over 1.4 million people trained in HIV prevention.

>73,000 people tested for HIV.

44% increase in people with access to treatment.

TRAVEL WITH A PURPOSE

Since Act4Africa began in 2000, we have been arranging life-changing volunteer trips to Africa. From 2009, we have specialised in bespoke medical elective trips for student and qualified doctors, nurses and midwives to experience a clinical placement at an African hospital.

As an experienced deliverer of health education in Africa for over 15 years, we are uniquely placed to understand students' requirements. Placements are tailor-made to suit skills and interests and participants gain hands-on experience at a choice of four hospitals in Uganda, Tanzania or Malawi, and in Uganda, at grass-roots level in the community. With local staff on hand to provide support and advice, peace-of-mind is guaranteed.

Act4Africa delivers an experience that Western culture and medicine cannot provide. Students who chose to do their elective with Act4Africa make a real impact on people's lives in some of the poorest areas of the world and their experiences stay with them for a life-time.

"I feel privileged to have been given this wonderful experience. I learnt a lot about medicine and myself: lessons which will stay with me forever." Caitlyn, nursing student at the University of Glasgow.

MEET JENNIFER

Jennifer is a medical student from the University of Sheffield and she carried out a four week elective at the Jinja Regional Referral Hospital.

"The placement was a fantastic experience and I learnt a huge amount. It was very different to medicine in the UK and I saw many diseases that I am unlikely to come across in the UK."

"One of the best things about the trip was the flexibility. Act4Africa were very helpful in allocating us as much time as we wished in the specialities we wanted – for me, this was paediatrics, obstetrics and general medicine. We also spent time at a local orphanage, rural village clinics and a charity for street children."

"Staying with one of the local doctors and his housekeeper (who was a fantastic cook!) really allowed us to integrate with the community and we became good friends with them. I made a lot of friends in Jinja and was overwhelmed by how welcoming and friendly everybody was."

MEET LAUREN

Lauren is a nursing student from the University of Glasgow and she carried out a four week elective with a friend at the Amana hospital in Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania.

"After the 3rd year of my nursing degree, I felt I was well equipped to handle anything that was thrown at me thanks to my experience in the hospitals of Glasgow. Boy was I wrong! Nursing in Tanzania is nothing like nursing in the UK, it is hard and dirty but it was so incredibly rewarding."

"Countless memories were made, many lessons were learned (always the hard way), and we grew not only as nurses but also as people. We were supported by Act4Africa every step of the way, and the knowledge that they were there to help if we needed them gave us the confidence to do so much and push ourselves so far from our comfort zones."

"Would I do this sort of thing again? In a heartbeat!"

FUNDRAISING

EVERY YEAR OUR SUPPORTERS RAISE THOUSANDS OF POUNDS THROUGH A VARIETY OF EVENTS, CHALLENGES AND EFFORTS. ENORMOUS THANKS GO TO EVERY ONE OF THEM.

THANK YOU

ACCOUNTING FOR EVERY PENNY

We are proud of our record for squeezing the maximum impact out of every penny. Part of this comes down to our structure: we fund Act4Africa Non-Government Organisations who employ local staff to do our work in Africa.

92p of every £1 we spend goes directly to delivering our projects.

*Based on 2016-2017 annual financial accounts presented here.

KATHY'S CENTRE

Opened in September 2017 and located in Mayuge, South East Uganda, Kathy's Centre was built in memory of Act4Africa co-founder Kathy Smedley. The centre provides health & support services, pre-school education, a youth club & agricultural, enterprise and financial literacy training to one of Africa's poorest communities.

KINDERGARTEN & YOUTH CLUB

An early years teacher herself, Kathy knew the importance of giving children the best start in life. Led by head teacher, Basil Amatre, the kindergarten will provide first class education for 3-6 year olds.

The youth of Mayuge will receive life skills, health education and have fun at the Youth Club, gaining social and communication skills to help them gain meaningful employment.

"The future of Africa lies with the well-being of its children. Today's investment in children is tomorrow's peace, stability, security, democracy and sustainable development." Martin Smedley.

HIV TESTING & COUNSELLING

The rural district of Mayuge has one of the highest rates of HIV prevalence in Uganda (10%). Kathy's Centre provides a permanent base for Act4Africa's testing and counselling services at the heart of a community in need; increasing knowledge, improving health and literally saving lives.

MICRO-FINANCE & ENTERPRISE TRAINING

Adolescent mothers and young women develop skills to gain economic independence and a voice in communities where women are often silenced.

MODEL GOAT FARM & BRICK MAKING

Kathy's Centre and goat farm will help the environment & provide new hope & opportunities for many through:

- Sustainable brick making
- Animal husbandry training
- Basic veterinary training
- Goat breeding providing access to independent income for young women & girls involved in our HEAL project.

FLAGSHIP BUILDING

Our sincere thanks go to the Engineers for Overseas Development (EfOD) North West, with whom we partnered to develop an eco-friendly design for the building and ensure Kathy's Centre was built sustainably and to a high-quality standard, complete with modern EcoSan toilets with disabled access.
